DESCRIPTION

Developed in collaboration with the WSBA Pro Bono and Public Service Committee

This program is designed for Washington legal professionals interested in engaging in pro bono work and deepening their understanding of ethical and equity issues in volunteer legal services.

PARTICIPANTS WILL LEARN:

- How to track pro bono hours
- Understanding RPC 6.1
- Practical guidance on ethical issues unique to volunteer legal clinic representation. Including limited-scope services, client communication, and working with interpreters.
- Explore the framework of cultural humility, understanding its core tenets and how to apply them in pro bono settings to better serve communities from diverse backgrounds.

MODERATOR

Andy Dugan - Director of Skagit Legal Aid, Mount Vernon

SCHEDULE

8:40 a.m. > Webcast Log-In Opens

8:55 a.m. > Welcome and Introductions

9:00 a.m. > Beyond the Billable Hour:
How to Successfully Track and Engage in Pro Bono Work
60 minutes, 1.0 Ethics credit

In this session you will learn more about RPC 6.1., and how to navigate engaging with pro bono. Many members assume that there are limitations to what counts as pro bono for pro bono hour reporting during relicensing. This session will demystify RPC 6.1., address and teach members about the pro bono crisis, and have clear follow up steps for how to get involved at the local level.

10:15 a.m. > Doing Good, Doing It Right:
Ethical Issues in Volunteer Legal Clinic Representation
60 minutes, 1.0 Ethics credit

Volunteer legal clinics are a cornerstone of access to justice in Washington, helping thousands of people each year through the service of dedicated lawyers. Providing brief advice in a clinic setting is one of the most rewarding forms of pro bono service, offering a meaningful opportunity to make an immediate difference in a client's life. This practical CLE will help volunteers serve clients with confidence by exploring the ethical issues unique to clinic representation, including limited-scope services, client communication, and working with interpreters. Participants will gain practical guidance on navigating the RPCs, setting clear expectations, and delivering high-quality legal assistance while avoiding common pitfalls.

11:15 a.m. > BREAK

11:30 a.m. > Using a Cultural Humility Lens In Pro Bono Services
60 minutes, 1.0 Ethics-Equity credit

Pro bono and legal aid programs often serve diverse clientele from communities impacted by poverty, racism, and oppression. Cultural humility is a framework that legal professionals can use to better understand and advocate for their client's needs across cultural differences. This training will describe how cultural humility differs from conventional cultural competence frameworks, and introduce the core tenets of cultural humility: 1) self-reflection, self-critique, and openness to new ways of being; 2) leveling power dynamics between clients and providers; 3) fostering meaningful community relationships; and 4) promoting institutional accountability.
